Open all Night. GIRL WITH AUBURN HAIR

CHICAGO'S MYSTERIOUS SINGER AN INDIANAPOLIS YOUNG WOMAN.

Miss Akass Making a Great Hit in a Beautiful Scene at Masonic Temple Garden.

For several weeks Chicago theatergoers have been somewhat excited over the mysterious personality of a pretty, auburnhaired young woman who has been appearing at the Masonic Temple Roof Garden in an act called "The Girl with the Auburn Hair." A similar "turn" was seen here last week as a feature of the Dockstader & Primrose minstrel company, except the singer was a man. The auburn-haired young woman declined to let her real name become known. One day the management invited all the auburn-haired girls in Chicago to attend the performance and about five hundred young woman blessed with Titian-tinted tresses accepted the invitation.

Indianapolis people who have been in Chicago recently and who have attended the Masonic Temple Roof Garden performances have seen something familiar in the features of the mysterious auburn-haired singer, and one or two believed they recognized in her Miss Akass, of this city. Those whose conviction was strong, having an acquaintance with the young woman, allowed their curiosity to develop sufficient temerity to call. Their cards were returned with the information that the fair singer was receiving no callers. This only strength-ened the belief of the Indianapolis people that they had solved Chicago's enigme Miss Akass was a memoer of the First Presbyterian Church choir, and her voice was developed under the direction of Pro-fessor Ernestinoff. She went to Chicago to secure an engagement. It is supposed the pportunity came to her to appear at the oof garden at a good salary, and she accepted it with the provision that she be alwed to keep her personality a secret. It remembered that Miss Akass was brownred, but not "auburn"-haired, and it is herefore surmised that Chicago's fad is largely founded on a wig. However, her act is a beautiful one, and offers the best kind of an opportunity for a singer, and Miss Akass's friends do not doubt that she, her brilliant voice, would have made garded by her friends here as a girl of great alent and ambition. From the way she has been charming Chicago audiences with her voice her friends expect much from her

THE M'GIBENY RECITAL. Playing of the Well-Knwn Violinist

Received with Great Applause. Mr. and Mrs. Hugh McGibeny, assisted by Mr. Douglass Webb, of Louisville, gave a recital last evening at the Propylaeum under the auspices of the Metropolitan School of Music. The audience was a large one of representative musicians and music levers, who were unstinted in their enthuslasm over the programme offered. Mr. Mc-Gibeny was heard for the first time in public since his return from a season of violin study in Germany. From his playing last ig he made the most of his time and has brought back with him a broader culture, clearer insight into the world of music, a greater skill and a larger measure of that capacity for interpretation which makes music more than notes and signs to be given translation into sound. Mr. McGibeny has gained in technical skill, and in the several programme numbers, while he played no concerto, he gave opportunity for a variety in style that showed in how many ways he has grown in his art. The first selection was the Franz Ries "Suite for violin and piano," Mrs. McGibeny playing the latter instrument. The work is one seldem heard here, but it is one beauty and of an order to please an audience. The first movement, allegro moderato, calls for broad strokes which show character and delicate tones which give light and shadows, the adagio movement is rich in harmonies, and in this Mr. McGibeny gave a sympathetic reading that awakened a responsiveness in the listener. The Barcarolle movement was delicious, as it pic tured the dipping of the oars, and out of all the suggestiveness in the music one could hear the boatman's song. In wavelike mo-tion the violinist let the flexibility of his bow speak for him. It was the last movement, the moto perpetuo, which captivated the audience. This was taken with accelerated speed and was played from beginning to end without a break in its marvelously sustained tremolo. With great nicety Mr. McGibeny made it full of color and vibration, until it sparkled like a shimmering palescent jewel. The tone was light, but not thin, and the bowing was so swift and easy that it became almost as much a part of the performance to see as the tones were to hear. At its close the utmost enthusiasm was exhibited, and in response Mr. Mc-Gibeny played the "Serenade," by Pierne. The second violin number was "Variations on an Air, by Bellin," by Ernst. This is not often heard, yet, of the entire programme of last evening, it was one of the most interesting parts. The composer has given the theme, a simple one, a varied setting, which ranges from that which is as simple as the subject itself, to the most intricate interwoven combinations of tones. It was in this that the violinist could show his versatility in technique. For the finale he played the "Carmen Fantasie," by Jeno Hubay, a brilliant arrangement of the favorite airs of the popular opera of "Car-men." All of the violinist's numbers were gems, each was artistic in itself, as well as haracteristic, and was interpreted with ease, grace and intelligence, and for each Mrs. McGibeny gave an excellent and sym-

Mr. Webb has sung here before and was so well liked that he was secured for last vening. He has a fine baritone voice, which cultivated, and, though suffering from a slight cold, he greatly pleased the audience. His clear enunciation, well-formed ones and the finish he gave his phrases were marked features of his songs. He was heard in a German lied, "Die Ablosung." by Alexis Hollaender, and then in "Love's Oracle," by Humperdinck, the composer of the famous "Hansel and Gretel" opera, and for a response the ever-charming "Who Is Sylvia?" by Schubert. beautiful song was "Somber Woods," by lly, and this was followed by "My Roswell received, and for the applause a they elicited he gave "I Know a Lit-ing number was his last, the "Prologue to I Pagliacci," the famous opera, by Leoncavello. Its words, of course, foretell the opera, and in the brief resume the composer has added his wealth of music, which makes it full of the power, depth and richness one might expect to have conducted Huder's Drug Store ness one might expect to have condensed into a prologue. This, too, was heartily received. Mrs. McGibeny contributed to the pleasure of the evening with one of her charming musical manufactures. "The Minuet," which has been put to music by Laura Sedgwick Collins, and for which Mr. McGibeny gave a violin accompaniment. With grace and ease Mrs. McGibeny plays the piano and half enacts what her words suggest. She, too, was recalled and gave a humorous sketch, "In May." The recital was an auspicious opening for what promises to be a rich musical season.

The dramatization of James Lane Allen's Kentucky idyll, "The Choir Invisible," received its first production at the Lafayette-square Theater, at Washington, last night. As a stage picture the critics said Ladies' Society of the Maennerchor gave a play was a very satisfactory reproduction of the early century atmosphere, which was the chief charm of Mr. Allen's story. The setting was excellent, reproducing the coloring of the Kentucky hills in summer and in autumn. Henry Jewett and the company supporting him proved themselves capable interpreters of Mr. Allen's lines. There was a large and appreciative audience, but the play, to become popular, will need some quickening in action. Mr. Jewett and Francis Hastings received several cur-

Old Fiddlers' Contest To-Night.

To-night the widely-heralded "Old-time Fiddlers' " contest, under the auspices of the Travelers' Protective Association, will occur at Tomlinson Hall. Fiddlers and their "rooters" from over the State are expected to arrive in considerable numbers to-day. Tom E. Potter will be the master of ceremonies. In the overture each fiddler will play his favorite tune and the melee sounds is expected to be unparalleled history. The contest will follow and many prizes are offered. All the old-time tunes like "Old Dan Tucker," "The Irish Washerwoman," "Pop Goes the Weasel," 'Bull Pup Hornpipe," "Arkansas Traveler" and "Gilderoy" will be played by fiddlers born and bred.

Firemen's Pension Fund Concert. So far as the programme for the concert for the benefit of the firemen's pension fund to be given at Tomlinson Hall next Thursday night, has been arranged it gives promof an excellent musical entertainment Miss Jeannette Orlopp, violinist, will be one of the features of the concert. The singers will be George Hamlin, tenor; Mrs. May Howell-Stowell, of Pittsburg, soprano; Mrs. Walter Fugate, contralto, and John Geiger, baritone. The accompanist will be Miss Shirly Schumacher. After the concert a dance will be given.

Notes of the Stage. The City Club closes at the Empire tonight. Clark Brothers' Royal Burlesquers will appear Monday, with a special feature added in a cinematograph presentation of the naval and military parades of the two great "Dewey days" in New York.

"An Easy Mark" will close at the Park Theater with two performances to-day. The coming week at the Park Joseph Hart will appear at the head of his own vaudeville company. This organization contains eighteen artists of prominence in the vaude-

"Niobe" will be seen only twice more at the Grand, this afternoon and to-night. "The Planter's Wife" will be presented by the stock company next week. One interesting feature of the coming week at the Grand is the first appearance with the com-pany of Miss Lucille La Verne, who will play the part of Aunt Susan Gordon in "The Planter's Wife."

A LOYAL LEGION DINNER

SENATOR FAIRBANKS AND OTHERS MAKE BRIEF ADDRESSES.

Presentation to Gen. R. S. Foster of a Scroll Containing His Enviable War Record.

The Indiana Commandery, Loyal Legion, gave a dinner at the German House last night, at which over a hundred members and invited guests were present. Admiral Brown was the presiding officer. Prior to the dinner a business session was held, and the following new members were elected: For the First Class-Maj. Thomas Graham, Brevet Brig. Gen. Jasper Packard, Adjutant Ganaiel S. Taylor, Sergt. Maj. Luther D. Waterman. For the Second Class-George M. Cobb,

> The dinner and the speech-making was interspersed by vocal and instrumental music by some young colored men. One of their songs, announced by Admiral Brown, was "A Razor Is a Real Thing in a Crowd." One of the enjoyable features of the evening was the presentation to Gen. R. S. Foster of an escutcheon bearing his military record. It was the gift of the commandery and was presented by William A. Ketcham, who made a short but eloquent speech. He referred to General Foster's career with the Thirteenth Indiana Regiment and paid the gallant soldier some high compliments. General Foster acknowledged the gift in a gracious way. In the course of his remarks he said that Mr. Ketcham reminded him of the man who likes a little taffy while he is here more than he does "epi-taffy" after he is gone, and, referring to his military service, General Foster said: "I did the best I could, and when a man does that he does all he can." Prof. Graham, superintendent of the Soldiers' Orphans' Home at Knightstown, followed General Foster with a song, "The Star-spangled Banner," in which everybody joined in the chorus. Gen. Jasper Packard spoke eloquently on the subject, "The Spirit of the Father Is in the Son." He was followed by Will Cum-back, who said he did not believe the title of General Packard's subject would hold good. "My father was a Presbyterian," said Mr. Cumback, "and I am a Methodist. My father was a Democrat and I never voted the Democratic ticket in my life." Cumback had no particular topic, and gave an entertaining talk on his experiences as a member of the Thirty-fourth Congress. Senator Fairbanks, who was one of the guests of honor, made brief remarks. He spoke of an evening during the late war Spain when he was with President McKinley. The war clouds were gathering thick and fast. During the course of their talk the President said to him: "I would not care for the millions of dollars that will be lost and the property that will be stroyed. It is the human suffering and the hearts that will break before the end of this organization in this hour of criticism, when he is undertaking to uphold the honor of the flag you fought so gallantly to Representative Overstreet said that the younger generation could not sit with the veterans in their councils, but they could breathe the influences and inspirations from the lives of these old soldiers. Mr. Alford, together with Archie W. Thompson, of Sistersville, and R. J. Heald, of Marietta, O., purchased 350 acres of leased oil territory in Van Buren township, this county, from Eugene H. Fishburn of Chicago, Richard L. Dezeng of Cincinnati and Elsworth L. Fee of Warren, Ind. The land lies about directly south of Van Buren. It has not been developed to any great extent, there being but two small producers on it at the present time. By the deal Mr. Alford comes into possession of seven-sixteenths of the land, Mr. Thompson the same amount and Mr. Heald the remaining two-sixteenths. It is the intention of the gentlemen to begin developing the property at once and if the fluid is found in paying quantities the drill will be worked to the utmost capacity.

THE LIGHT THAT FAILS. Contract Muddle May Put Jeffersonville Streets in Darkness.

Special to the Indianapolis Journal. JEFFERSONVILLE, Ind., Oct. 13.-A contest is imminent between the city of Jeffersonville and the Electric Light, Gas, Heating and Coke Company, which lost a renewal of contract with the city for ten years. The contract went to H. M. Geiger, of Fort Wayne; and he cannot be ready to fulfill his agreement before Jan. 1. The old contract expires Oct. 17 and the company holding it has notified the city officials that it will not furnish street lights after that date. The officials threaten to abrogate the company's franchise if the refusal is made good, and the city treasurer has been ordered to hold up moneys due the company until it comes to terms. On the other hand, it is intimated that the company will sue for its dues to the expiration of its contract.

GAS LEASES SOLD.

Hartford City Glass Company Transfers Nearly 200 Holdings. Special to the Indianapolis Journal. HARTFORD CITY, Ind., Oct. 13 .- Yesterday afternoon the Hartford City Glass Company transferred to the American Window Glass Company, or new trust, 191 gas leases, covering many thousands of acres of gas territory in Blackford county. The documents required $191 in revenue stamps. The leases go in with the sale of the big Southside window glass plant cost the trust about $10,000 a year rental. It is due to the Hartford City Glass Company that the gas has been so jealously guarded. The entire township in which Hartford City is located is under lease to the various manufacturing concerns in the city, and so far the foreign pipe lines have been excluded from the coveted
